CLAIMS OF COLONIAL DAMES.

NEW-YORK SOCIETY FEELS INJURED BY A MISAPPROPRIATION OF ITS TITLE.

THE NATIONAL ORGANIZATION, FORMED LATER IS THE CULPRIT, SAYS A MEMBER OF THE ORIGINAL BODY.

Faeling runs high at present among the members of the original society of Colonial Dames because o the controversy between that organization and the National society. New-York women believe they have just cause for their claim to first consideration, and the indignation feit at the action of the Philadelphians does not diminish.

One of the New-Yorkers, in speaking of the sub-ject, said yesterday: "We were the first body of women to project the idea of forming a society of this kind. We assumed the labor of its organization, and took the name that indicated its object. When we asked women of other States to join with us and form chapters in their own part of the country some of the women of Philadelphia co-operated Later, when several members of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania a-ked Mrs. Crawford Arnold to organize a similar society in Pennsylvania, a letter was written to the New-York Dames explaining the idea as conceived by some of the Philadelphians of forming chapters in each State as part of a National organization. But that this National organization should be a Philadelphia one was not intimated. The letter was signed Mrs. Alexander Biddle, president of the Pennsylvania Society of the Colonial Dames of America. and Mrs. Dundas Lippincott, president of the Pennsylvania Chapter of the Colonial Dames of America. By the misappropriation of our title I claim we have been injured socially and financially, and the titles used by these Pennsylvania societies yould seem to indicate that they tacitly acknowledge existence of a superior order in the society edge existence of a superior order in the society. That order would naturally be the Society of the Colonial Dames of America, and if the word 'National' should be prefixed to this title it would merely give the name a redundancy of expression." The original Society of Colonial Dames was formed at a meeting held in the spring of 1890. A short time before this an invitation was sent to the Philadelphia women to attend the meeting and form a Pennsylvania chapter. This invitation was accepted by them, and they became supporters of the movement.

accepted by them, and they became supporters of the movement.

But dissatisfaction arose in the Quaker City, and, in the words of Miss Annie Heillingsworth Wharton, historian of the National society, "it was thought inadvisable for Pennsylvania to join a society the tendency of which was to make the other State societies or chapters adjuncts of the New-York society and subservient to it."

"There is just where the trouble lies," said a New-York Dame. "It is the dislike societies of other cities have to being led by a New-York society. It is not that we have a local prejudice, but that local prejudices from other places would make it appear that we are the aggressors.

The suit impending in this matter will involve questions of interest on both sides. The New-Yorkers feel they are the injured party, and that public sentiment, when the case is thoroughly understood, will be with them.

CHILDREN PROTECT ANIMALS.

A meeting of the Standish auxiliary of Our Animal Protective League was held yesterday afterjuvenile humane organization with which it is con-

The headquarters of the league are in the United Charities Building, Twenty-second-st. and Fourth ave. Dr. William H. Tolman, vice-president, was present yesterday, and assisted Mrs. Standish in naking clear to the children the object for which they met. Our Animal Protective League works in sympathy with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Its object is to interest children in the care and protection of dumb creatures and to educate them to a sympathetic understanding of animals. This is done through leaflet stories, lantern picture talks, practical demonstrations and an information bureau.

Cards were given to the children, on which the following pledge is printed:

I hereby promise that as far as in my power lies I will prevent all crueky to dumb animals, and will aid and succor those that are weak and help-

The children receive a badge, which is a small glided pin, and it was worn with great pride by each child. each child. There are some directions printed as to how an animal may be protected, and these were distributed among the children.

MRS. PALMER LAYS DOWN THE LAW.

There was a decided ripple of excitement at the adjourned meeting, held yesterday, at Lyric Hall, to continue the annual election of the Professional Woman's League. The accusation made that Mrs. A. M. Palmer had paid back dues of delinquent members in order that they might vote for her for president was found to be wholly false.

"It was Mrs. Annie Dacie Lloyd," said Mrs. Palmer, "who generously offered to give her check for 1200 to pay dues of members who were unable to liquidate their own obligations, and this was done without any stipulation as for whom these members should vote. The whole transaction was members should vote. The whole transaction was entirely unknown to me at the time."

During the election yesterday Mrs. Palmer, with great dignity, informed the members that all senseless chatter and insinuations tending to bring her personal matters into the League must stop. She asserted that many times in the past such infractions of good breeding had occurred, but would be tolerated no longer. Hereafter any reflection cast upon her conduct would have to be answered in the courts.

MEN FAVOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

SAMUEL GOMPERS, PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR. TELLS WHY HE INDORSES THE MOVEMENT.

At the National American Woman Suffrage Convention just held in Grand Rapids, Mich., the following letter was read from Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor dent of the American Federation of Labor, at every convention where the subject was brought up and discussed, has unfaiteringly declared for equal legal, political and economic rights for women. At the convention held at Detroit some thirteen years a go a resolution to that effect was unanimously adopted. A petition to Congress for the submission of a constitutional amendment enfranchising women was circulated among our various unions, and within two months it received nearly three hundred thousand signatures and indorsements. At the Kansas City convention last December the question of woman's work was discussed, and the following declaration unanimously adopted:

"In view of the awful conditions under which woman is compelled to toil, this, the eighteenth, annual convention of the American Federation of Labor strongly urges the more general formation of trade unions of wage-working women, to the end that they may scientifically and permanently abolish the terrible evils accompanying their weakened, because unorganized, state; and we emphatically reiterate the trade union demands that women receive equal compensation for equal service performed."

You will see that there ought to be no question as to the attitude of the organized labor movement on this subject, notwithstanding the designing misrepresentations of enemies of our cause, who seek to place our movement in a faise light. Let me say, too, that the declaration just quoted is not for compliment merely, for members of many of our organizations have been involved in long and sacrificing contests in order to secure to women equal pay for equal work.

GERMAN IDEA OF EDUCATION.

DR. RUSSELL SPEAKS AT THE LAST CON-FERENCE OF THE PUBLIC EDUCA-TION ASSOCIATION.

A report of the Philadelphia conference on eduwas the first businers before the Public Education Association yesterday afternoon at its last meeting for this season.

Miss Draper, who gave the report, apologized for the absence of Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer. An idea from Massachusetts was advanced and met with approval. It was to have a librarian detailed to instruct children in the use of catalogues, thus enabling them to find greater aid in getting books from the free libraries. The meeting of the conference next year will be held at Brookline, Mass., and will be called the Eastern Conference,

Dr. James Russell, in his talk on "The German Idea of Public Education." explained the evolution of the school system in Germany from the earliest time; its condition under the early Church, its development through the Reformation, and its pres-He said that the aim of the school in Germany was declared to be the training of God-fearing, patriotic, self-supporting citizens. He explained how boys and girls leave public schools at fourteen years of age, and are then expected to take the extension course in learning whatever trade or calling they take up. He pointed out the excellence of this system in developing skilled workmen. But of "The system is thus not helpful to self-advancement," said Dr. Russell, "and the German school exists, not for the pupil, but for the State."

Nevertheless he thought there were many excellent things in the German system of education which this country would find useful if they were adapted to Western conditions.

EVENING WITH KIPLING.

Mrs. Henry E. Rhoades, of South Second-ave. Mount Vernon, entertained the Ladies' Friday Night Club at her home last evening. The subject considered was Rudyard Kipling. "The Brushwood Boy" was read, and several other short stories. An interesting discussion and criticism followed the reading.

Mrs. Mark D. Stiles sang one of Kipling's poems which has been set to music, which was greatly enjoyed. At the close of the evening supper was

PEACOCK FEATHERS UNLUCKY.

Ill-luck is said to lurk in peacock feathers, and bad fortune is supposed to visit the house where they are used as a decoration. It is said that children will become ill if peacock feathers are in children will become ill if peacock feathers are in their rooms. Some young women are superstitious about having them in the room where they receive their sweethearts, believing their presence would prevent proposal.

Time was when the peacock was looked upon as a semblance of royalty, and gastronomically the bird was considered a dainty dish. Histories speak of the prominence in which the peacock was held in classic days. Knights of old swore by "the peacock" and on festival occasions the bird was served garnished with all its elaborate plumage.

EXTERMINATORS OF THE GYPSY MOTH. The public-spirited women in a certain Massasetts town have shown themselves wiser in their generation than the men, who have signally failed in dealing with the gypsy moth. The women, recognizing the "power of a penny" in stimulat-ing childish endeavor, have offered the children 10 cents a hundred for the little nests or cocoons. The two children securing the largest numbers also received prizes of $5 and $3. Many poor children have earned money that was much needed, and the ravages of the caterpillars are checked, it is suggested that other clubs in towns afflicted with these peats might imitate this method. By writing to Professor Fernald, State Agricultural College, Amherst, they may obtain instructions as to methods, time, burning of nests, etc.

A LIVELY SESSION.

BROOKLYN WOMEN CALLED ON TO RE-DRESS GRIEVANCES.

THE HEALTH PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION COVERS THE GROUND FROM SOFT COAL TO

HIGH CARSTEPS. The last regular meeting of the Woman's Health Protective Association of Brooklyn took place yes-terday morning at Wissner Hall, the president, Mrs. James Scrimgeour, being in the chair

The session was long and crowded to its utcapacity with business. Following the reading of the secretary's and the treasurer's reports, the usual number of letters peal, whose writers, finding the city officials could do nothing for them, came to the association for redress, were read and passed upon.

One writer petitioned for a more thorough cleaning of streets, declaring that one block on Sevent enth-st. had not been swept for six months, while another writer, after thanking the association over and over again for "its efforts to make a decent city for us," requested its members to turn their attention to the vociferous hucksters, "who we wish were dead." This writer concluded his plaint with the announcement, "I would horsewhip publicly residents who place a newspaper in any

These appeals paved the way for the usual conference on the waste-paper and circular nuisance, and the Chair announced regarding the latter that an ordinance had been passed in both the Municipal Council and the Municipal Assembly prohibiting the indiscriminate throwing about of circulars, and that as soon as the Mayor's signature was appended the women could go to work.

"This," said Mrs. Scrimgeour, with a sigh of rellef, "is the accomplishment of the work of eight

Mrs. Jacobs, who was asked to report regarding the sanitary conditions of the schools, declared that the movement begun by the Health Protective Association seven years ago had borne fruit, and that the schools, with the exception of two-Nos. 27 and 32-were in good condition. The former was to be repaired during the summer, while the latter was in great need of enlarging.

A number of the women present then spoke upon the subject, declaring that school money might better be expended in enlarging and making the sanitary conditions of schools perfect than in buying ourteen lots to be used by the Boys' High School for athletics. The subject of the soft-coal nulsance in the East-for athletics.

The subject of the soft-coal nulsance in the Eastern District was brought up by Mrs. C. C. Dike, who also stated that the Federal Building authorities were inviting bids for a supply of soft coal. This brought up the question as to whether the Federal Government could overturn the laws of the city, which forbid the use of soft coal within a radius of four miles from the City Hall. The expectoration question being the next on the docket, Mrs. Brooks announced that in San Francisco every conductor is appointed a policeman and obliged to arrest every one who expectorates, or be arrested himself. Signs are also placed on the steps of buildings, "Why spit upon these steps when the ground is so near?"

Mrs. H. A. Powell, being asked to speak a word of encouragement, said, sadly, that she had nothing encouraging to say. She had done her best to keep her own premises and ash-barrels clean, but a look down the street and at her barrel which a new maid had put out convinced her that eternal vigilance was the only price of liberty.

"Ah" said Mrs. Scrimgeour, solemnly, "you are reaping the results of a neeligent housekeeper who had that girl before you. It is the housekeepers who are largely to biame for not training their servants."

The question of the high steps on the open cars was next considered, and a committee of women, with Mrs. Langstaff as chalrman, was appointed to contain the contains the conta matter.

A plea was also made for more drinking fountains in Brooklyn—this especially in behalf of the bicyclists. Mrs. Elliott G. Langstaff, in behalf of the management of the Greco-Roman fair held in Brooklyn, thanked the association for its substantial aid at that time, and announced that $11,000 had been cleared as the result of the fair.

Mrs. Scrimgeour stated that the annual meeting of the association, to be held on June 2 in Memorial Hall, would be an æsthetic function, when for once the subjects of expectoration and ashbarrels would be eschewed. Dr. Josiah Strong has been invited to give an address on that day.

ECONOMICAL COOKING. Practical and economical cooks will find the folowing recipes much to their liking: BOILED BEEF.

Cut the meat into thin shreds or small slices with sharp knife; remove any gristle there may be, grease the inside of a fireproof mould with sombutter, then arrange a layer, about a quarter of an inch thick, made as follows: Some grated milk roll. chopped shallots, parsley, mushrooms, salt and pepper to taste; into this stir a little milk or the yolk of an egg, thinned with milk, to make it see evenly in the mould. For a small mould, for one or two persons, the whole yolk will not be repuired. Meantime warm the meat in a little butter or lard over the fire (if desired, do the same with very finely sliced potatoes), and have ready a tea or breakfast cupful (according to requirements) of good broth or grayy, containing some of the onions and carrots which usually flavor such stock. Stir into this a couple of eggs; pour it into the mould with the meat, etc. Over the top put a layer of the mixture with which the mould is lined, and bake in the oven till a good color, or boil a cupful of rice (after having well washed it) first in a little water then in some good stock, till it is quite tender; then, without straining off all the liquor, mix it in a basin with grated cheese, sait and cayenne to taste, a little piece of butter and the slices and spread the mixture thickly over them, after which dip them into or brush them over with the white of egg, previously beaten up, then with a little melted butter, and finally sprinkle them on both sides with breadcrumbs and grated cheese. Bake them in a little tin in the oven, or fry them, if preferred. Serve with sardine sauce in a boat.

SARDINE SAUCE.

SARDINE SAUCE.

Remove the skin a pes from the necessary number of sardines, pound them to a cream with a little fresh butter, stir them into any kind of previously prepared brown sauce (or some good gravy); let the mixture boil up once, and serve. A few drops of lemon juice or some white or red wine may be added to improve the flavor.

EXCELLENT MEAT CAKES.

An excellent meat cake can also be made. Chop quarter of its weight of any kind of fresh meat, also finely chopped, and a few onlons, previously slightly parbolled and sliced; put all this into a basin, and stir in three eggs, three tablespoonfus of good broth, two of red wine, some sait and pepper to taste, two or three boned sardines, some parsley or any kind of favorite herbs, and a handful of white breadcrumbs, soaked and squeezed free from moisture. Mix these ingredients thoroughly, put the mixture into a shaped mould, bake it for an hour, turn it out and serve with a thick brown sauce, with mushrooms.

Or, again, try this: Take about haif a soupplateful of chopped ham, a couple of sardines, a few pickled gherkins and an onion, all cut small. Mix the yolks of three hard-holied eggs, pressed through a sieve, with a little butter beaten to a cream, some oil, vinegar, white wine, sait and favorite spices; sit this mixture in with the other chopped ingredients, mixing all thoroughly. Stand this aside to get coid; even put it on ice, if possible. Serve or dry toast, over which a layer of thick mayonnaise should be spread, or in the scooped whites of hard-holied eggs. also finely chopped, and a few ontons, previously

THE KING'S DUST. "Thou shalt die," the priest said to the king.
"Thou shalt vanish like the leaves of spring Like the dust of any common thing.
One day thou upon the winds shall blow!"
"Nay, not so," the king said: "I shall stay While the great sun in the sky makes day! Heaven and earth, when I do, pass away.
In my tomb I wait till all things go!"

Then the king died. And with myrrh and nard, Washed with palm wine, swathed in linen h
Rolled in naphtha gum, and under guard
Of his steadfast tomb, they laid the king.
Century fled to century; still he lay
Whole as when they hid him first away.
Sooth, the priest had nothing more to say—
He, it seemed, the king, knew everything.

One day armies with the tramp of doom
Overthrew the huge blocks of the tomb:
Swarming aunbeams searched its chambered gloom,
Bedouins camped about the sand-blown spot,
Little Arabs, answering to their name,
With a broken mummy fed the flame,
Then a wind among the ashes came.
Blew them lightly—and the king was not!

MRS. MARY ELLEN WATSON. President-General of the T. S. S.: In pursuance of your request I write to inform you of the death of my brother's wife, Mrs. Mary Ellen Watson, a member of the Sunshine Society. When she be came a member her home was in Albany, N. Y., but later she and her husband removed to Lynn, Mass., where she died. She was of a peculiarly hopeful disposition, and, although an invalid for twenty years, never perhaps in all that time free from pain. She was cheerful and courageous, her grave spirit sustaining her through many trials, and her sunny nature imparting its brightness t others. So nature had made her a member of the others. So nature had made her a member of the Sunshine Society even before she joined the T. S. S., of which she was so proud to be a member. Her little pin was placed in the soft lace at her throat as she lay in her coffin. Her death occurred just at the dawn of Friday, May 5, and was so painless and quiet that of her it may be said that she stole away to some fairer clime to say "Good-morning" to the loved ones who had gone before. Truly yours.

Examine the new oil cloth on the kitchen floor; its color and gloss are being destroyed and you may see where a cake of common soap fresh from the hot water in the scrubbing bucket has been laid on it for a moment, the free alkali having eaten an impression of the cake into the bright colors.

A more careful examination will show small "pin holes" here and there where the alkali has cut through the surface to soak into and gradually weaken the whole floor covering.
